ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Katherine Gray King was born on January 31, 1923 in Wilmington, North Carolina.

She attended New Hanover High School where she was elected to the National Honor Society.

Her undergraduate years were spent at the University of North Carolina—Greensboro, where she received her B.S. in Home Economics.

Her graduate work was completed at State University of New York-Brockport and the University of Rochester.

She served as vice president and president of the Monroe County chapter of the Home Economics Teachers Association of New York State.

Two years of teaching at her home town high school were followed by 21 years as Home Economics Teacher in the Spencerport New York Central School. She retired in 1979.

After marrying her husband, Carl R. King, at the end of World War II, they moved north to raise their family. Mr. King is retired as Security Training Officer for Eastman Kodak Company.

Their children, Caroline Justice and Richard King, presented them two grandchildren, Kerry and Mikey.

Mrs. King's hobbies include gardening and travel. THE SEVEN GRAY BROTHERS OF THE CONFEDERATE CAVALRY is her first published book.

DEDICATION

This exciting and revealing search began upon the discovery of a 2″ x 3″ daguerreotype photograph of four young men.

It had been known and passed down through the Gray Family for many years that seven brothers served in the Virginia Cavalry of the Confederate States of America during the United States Civil War.

Over the years family members preserved the photograph through moving and floods and unknown disasters. It was found in my mother's possessions upon her death in 1972.

A family cousin was interested in the Gray Family Tree and put together an extensive record. It was not until 1981 that these documents combined to tell a story that 120 years later deserved to be told.

The citizenship and service of the Gray family for over 180 years in America is presented in this compilation.

It has turned out to be a labor of love and excitement to chronicle in order the record of these patriotic men. That one of them was my great grandfather, John Craig Gray, makes this book a lasting tribute to his memory.

PROLOGUE

In the late 1700's William Gray, of Scotch-Irish descent, arrived in America from County Down, Ireland to establish himself in a land of great promise.

Being a patriot, he served as a captain in the Militia of Washington County, Virginia from 1812-1815. Two generations later, his grandsons were involved in a great military conflict.

Basically, their needs were met in America by the private ownership of land and the development of that land to raise sheep and horses. That they were caught up in the fervor of war, caused them to serve the State of Virginia which they had chosen for their home.

ON THE SURFACE it would appear that there is a great deal of redundancy in the presentation of military service cards representing the service time of these seven (7) cavalrymen.

JUST THE REVERSE is true. The days, months and years of individual service are documented for seven military men with the same last name, as they served over a period of 4 years 120 years ago in the field.

A review of the service cards will supply you, the reader, with information that is pertinent to places and events of that day.

The high hopes of the Confederacy to end the conflict with a military victory is reflected in the 1-year sign up on the first cards. Subsequent cards reflect the realities with 3 years or the war enlistments.

It is apparent from the photograph of the four brothers that John Craig Gray, being the oldest and recognizing the importance of what was about to happen, persuaded the first three who entered the cavalry — Frederick, David and Robert — to sit for a formal portrait, a portrait which might not be possible ever again.

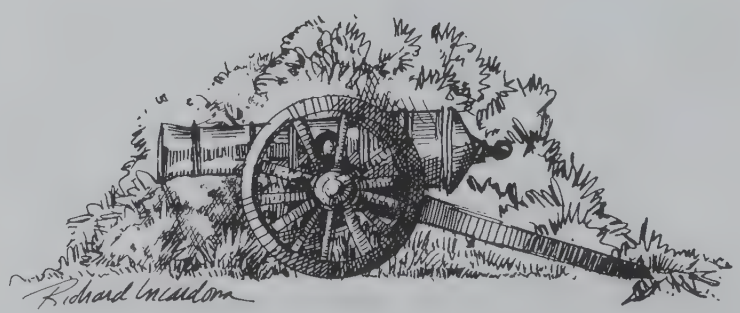
FREDERICK T. GRAY



FREDERICK T. GRAY

Frederick T. Gray and his brothers, David and Robert Emmett, enlisted in the Washington Mounted Rifles (commanded by Captain William E. Jones who later became a general of the Confederate Armies) on May 14, 1861. This company was sent to the First Virginia Cavalry, JEB Stuart's command.[1]

"In the fall of 1863, Washington County was overrun by stragglers and deserters from the army, claiming to belong to the cavalry service. These men traveled about and over the county in bands of from two to twenty, and robbed the citizens indiscriminately of their money, clothing, horses, saddles, bridles, their grain and forage, by force and actual violence, and such was the condition of affairs that the County Court of Washington County appealed to the General Assembly of the State for a remedy, stating that they had appealed to the military authorities, but to no avail."[2]

To protect the citizens, several companies of infantry and cavalry were organized in Washington County. Frederick T. Gray left the First Virginia Cavalry and took command of Company "F", 21st Virginia Cavalry.[3] These facts account for the notations on his record "absent without leave" from September — December 1863 from the First Virginia Cavalry.

The "in arrest" and "on court martial" in Frederick's military record were pursued extensively by your author. An Archivist in the Military Archives Division, National Archives and Records Service, Washington, DC, states in her letter: "We have once again examined the Confederate records in our custody and have been unable to locate the inspection report mentioning F.T. Gray. There is nothing to indicate that the report was ever in the custody of the National Archives. We only know that it was in the War Department in the early 1900's when the Confederate compiled service records were created. Some of the documents used for the carding process were only borrowed by the War Department from the States or from private individuals. The Archives itself was not established until 1934 well after the creation of the compiled service records. It is possible there might be some information on Gray in the records of the State of Virginia. We suggest that you write to the Virginia State Library, Archives Division, 11th and Capitol Streets, Richmond, Virginia 23219.

"I must admit I am puzzled by Gray's service record. The phrase 'on court martial' implies that he was on court-martial duty not that he was being court-martialed himself. However one of the other cards in his compiled service record is marked 'in arrest', and that certainly implies that he himself was in some sort of difficulty. I am sorry we could not help you".

A researcher commissioned to investigate this startling information states: "One thing I noticed about the chronology of the events in the military record of F.T. Gray: the note about being 'in arrest', (Dec, 1864) comes after the note about being 'on court martial' (March, 1864). Usually we think of the term 'arrest' being used before a trial. The pay vouchers are confusing because one has him being paid for March and April 1864 (paid in August) and another is pay for May to November 1864 (paid in December). Perhaps the delay in payment for March and April reflects his court martial troubles; the continuation of payment for the May to November period, however, certainly sheds no light on why he is 'in arrest' in December. It would seem to indicate that the two events — on court martial, in arrest — were not related. Maybe he and his commanding offecer had regular disagreements!"

Colonel William E. Peters, commander of the 21st Virginia Cavalry Regiment, was placed 'in arrest' on his refusal to burn Chambersburg, Pennsylvania because the town was occupied by non-combatants. He was subsequently reinstated.

It should be noted that Frederick maintained the rank of Captain throughout his service in the 21st Virginia Cavalry. Whatever his problems, he seems to have emerged unscathed in each case.

*This company was successively designated as Captain Jones' Company, Washington Mounted Rifles, and as Company L and (2d) Company D, 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry.

The 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry, with twelve companies, A to M, completed its organization by the appointment of field officers July 16, 1861. Captain William T. Martin's independent company of Mississippi cavalry and Captain William M. Stone's independent company of Alabama cavalry appear to have subsequently been temporarily attached to this regiment as Companies N and O, but they were soon afterward assigned to the 2d Battalion Mississippi Cavalry as Companies A and D, respectively, and they subsequently became Companies A and D, Jeff Davis Legion Mississippi Cavalry. An independent company of Virginia cavalry (which had been organized May 27, 1861, and temporarily attached to the 26th Regiment Virginia Infantry) became (2d) Company L of this organization about April, 1862, when the regiment was reorganized, but it was soon afterward transferred to the 5th Regiment Virginia Cavalry and became Company A of that regiment.

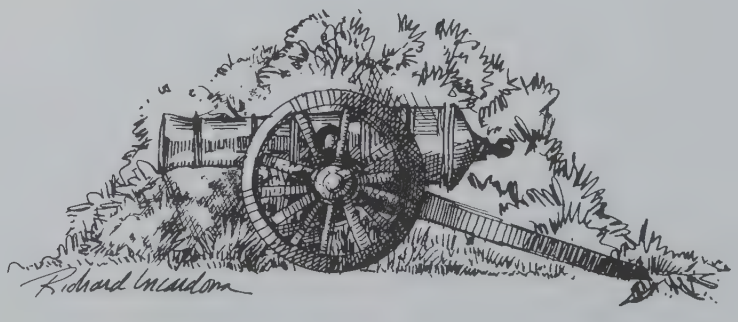
DAVID C. GRAY



DAVID C. GRAY

David C. Gray enlisted May 14, 1861 as a private along with his brothers, Frederick and Robert.

Items issued to him that first year included a blanket ($2.75), a pair of pants ($3.50) and a curry comb. No mention is made of the amount of pay the recruits received.

In April, 1863, David was granted an 8-day furlough for which he received compensation of $0.80.

On September 14, 1863 David received at Abingdon, Virginia from William Radefer the sum of $8.50 for transportation for himself from Abingdon to Fredericksburg, being 340 miles at two and one half cents a mile.

The COMPENDIUM OF THE WAR OF THE REBELLION lists "skirmish at Raccoon Ford" on October 10, 1863. On October 11, 1863 David's horse was reported killed at Raccoon Ford in engagement with the enemy. He received from the Quartermaster $900.00 for his horse and equipment. On November 1863 David was detailed to go for a fresh horse.

On October 2, 1864 David was taken to Receiving and Wayside Hospital at Richmond, Virginia. The same day he was admitted to Chimborazo Hospital No. 5, also at Richmond, with a flesh wound in the left leg. October 10, 1864 he was given a 40-day furlough to recover.

On February 23, 1865 David was again admitted to the Chimborazo Hospital No. 5 with scabies.

Note: Scabies is a contagious disease caused by a mite.

*This company was successively designated as Captain Jones' Company, Washington Mounted Rifles, and as Company L and (2d) Company D, 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry.

The 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry, with twelve companies, A to M, completed its organization by the appointment of field officers July 16, 1861. Captain William T. Martin's independent company of Mississippi cavalry and Captain William M. Stone's independent company of Alabama cavalry appear to have subsequently been temporarily attached to this regiment as Companies N and O, but they were soon afterward assigned to the 2d Battalion Mississippi Cavalry as Companies A and D, respectively, and they subsequently became Companies A and D, Jeff Davis Legion Mississippi Cavalry. An independent company of Virginia cavalry (which had been organized May 27, 1861, and temporarily attached to the 26th Regiment Virginia Infantry) became (2d) Company L of this organization about April, 1862, when the regiment was reorganized, but it was soon afterward transferred to the 5th Regiment Virginia Cavalry and became Company A of that regiment.

*This company was successively designated as Captain Jones' Company, Washington Mounted Rifles, and as Company L and (2d) Company D, 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry.

The 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry, with twelve companies, A to M, completed its organization by the appointment of field officers July 16, 1861. Captain William T. Martin's independent company of Mississippi cavalry and Captain William M. Stone's independent company of Alabama cavalry appear to have subsequently been temporarily attached to this regiment as Companies N and O, but they were soon afterward assigned to the 2d Battalion Mississippi Cavalry as Companies A and D, respectively, and they subsequently became Companies A and D, Jeff Davis Legion Mississippi Cavalry. An independent company of Virginia cavalry (which had been organized May 27, 1861, and temporarily attached to the 26th Regiment Virginia Infantry) became (2d) Company L of this organization about April, 1862, when the regiment was reorganized, but it was soon afterward transferred to the 5th Regiment Virginia Cavalry and became Company A of that regiment.

ROBERT E. GRAY

ROBERT E. GRAY

On May 14, 1861 Robert Emmett Gray enlisted at Abingdon, Virginia as a private (Captain W.E. Jones' Company) Washington Mounted Rifles — later designated Company "L" and (2nd) Company "D", First Regiment Virginia Cavalry.

In October 1861 Robert was reported sick at James Skinner's. There were people who took sick soldiers into their homes for care. In March and April 1863 Robert was on * detached service (possibly information gathering).

General Ewell sent scouts to reconnoiter the defenses of Harrisburg as the Confederate flag was being raised over Carlisle Barracks on June 28, 1863.

On July 1, 1863 the COMPENDIUM OF THE WAR OF THE REBELLION lists "action at Carlisle, Pennsylvania."[4] Robert's horse was killed at Carlisle, Pennsylvania on that same date.

On July 10, 1863 Robert was captured at Funkstown, Maryland. The COMPENDIUM lists skirmishes at and near Funkstown on July 7, 8 and 10-13.

Robert was listed on the "Roll of Prisoners of War" paroled at Baltimore, Maryland August 16, 1863. He also appears on "Roll of Prisoners of War" at Point Lookout, Maryland August 17, 1863. On September 13, 1863 he escaped.

In October 1863 Robert was absent with leave with permit to go after a fresh horse after receiving compensation of $608 for one Roan Mare killed in the engagement with the enemy at Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

On December 1, 1863 Robert was reported "absent without leave." On January 2, 1864 he transfered to the 21st Virginia Cavalry (2nd) Company "D", First Regiment (enlisted by his brother, Captain F.T. Gray).

In October 1864 Robert was listed as "absent sick" and in December 1864 "absent without leave". The COMPENDIUM lists an "expedition to Southwest, Virginia" December 10-29, 1864. Numerous histories mention that at this time many military men went home to protect family and farms from the enemy.

[4]Frederick Dyer, COMPENDIUM OF THE WAR OF THE REBELLION, p. 827.

*The term "Secret Service" as used today was referred to as "Special" or "Detatched Service" during the Civil War.

Gray. Robert. E.

2 Co. D., 1 Virginia Cavalry.

Capt. Martin's Independent Company Mississippi Cavalry and Captain Stone's Independent Company Alabama Cavalry were temporarily attached to this regiment as Cos. N and O, but were afterward assigned to the 2d Batt'n Miss. Cav. as Cos. A and D, and subsequently became Cos. A and D of Jeff Davis Legion, Miss. Cav.

*This company was successively designated as Captain Jones' Company, Washington Mounted Rifles, and as Company L and (2d) Company D, 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry.

The 1st Regiment Virginia Cavalry, with twelve companies, A to M, completed its organization by the appointment of field officers July 16, 1861. Captain William T. Martin's independent company of Mississippi cavalry and Captain William M. Stone's independent company of Alabama cavalry appear to have subsequently been temporarily attached to this regiment as Companies N and O, but they were soon afterward assigned to the 2d Battalion Mississippi Cavalry as Companies A and D, respectively, and they subsequently became Companies A and D, Jeff Davis Legion Mississippi Cavalry. An independent company of Virginia cavalry (which had been organized May 27, 1861, and temporarily attached to the 26th Regiment Virginia Infantry) became (2d) Company L of this organization about April, 1862, when the regiment was reorganized, but it was soon afterward transferred to the 5th Regiment Virginia Cavalry and became Company A of that regiment.

JOHN CRAIG GRAY

JOHN CRAIG GRAY

John Craig Gray married Nancy D. King and had three sons before she died in 1859.

On July 15, 1863 John left his young sons with family and enlisted in Abingdon, Virginia,as a private in Company "G" of the 21st Virginia Cavalry, serving as a recruiter. As was a common practice in the Confederate Cavalry, he took his own horse with him into military service.

At the end of the war, John married his second wife, Jennie. They had a daughter, Belle C. Gray.

In 1881 John Craig Gray served as the Treasurer of Washington County, Virginia.[5]

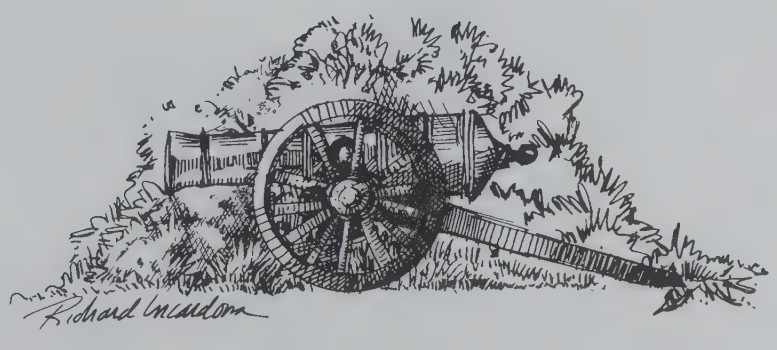
CHARLES P. GRAY



CHARLES P. GRAY

On June 13, 1863, soon after his 17th birthday, Charles P. Gray was enlisted by Captain Litchfield into the First Virginia Cavalry, Company "G" and joined his older brothers, Robert and David.

On December 4, 1864 Charles was discharged from the Lacy Springs Hospital to report to his command for duty.

Apparently he was subsequently captured for his name appears on a Muster Roll of Prisoners of War belonging to the Army of Northern Virginia, surrendered by General Robert E. Lee, Confederate States of America, to Lieutenant General U.S. Grant, then paroled at Appomattox Court House, Virginia April 9, 1865.

Martin's independent company of Mississippi cavalry and Captain William M. Stone's independent company of Alabama cavalry appear to have subsequently been temporarily attached to this regiment as Companies N and O, but they were soon afterward assigned to the 2d Battalion Mississippi Cavalry as Companies A and D, respectively, and they subsequently became Companies A and D, Jeff Davis Legion Mississippi Cavalry. An independent company of Virginia cavalry (which had been organized May 27, 1861, and temporarily attached to the 26th Regiment Virginia Infantry) became (2d) Company L of this organization about April, 1862, when the regiment was reorganized, but it was soon afterward transferred to the 5th Regiment Virginia Cavalry and became Company A of that regiment.

COMPENDIUM
WAR OF THE REBELLION

by
Frederick Dyer

The COMPENDIUM is a major accomplishment of Frederick Dyer.

It is inconceivable that such an accurate history of the Union forces activities could be assembled.

A similar work is missing from the Confederate side. However, by matching Confederate military service cards with Union actions, an interaction can be recorded.

FAREWELL TO TROOPS

"After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude the Army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers. I need not tell the survivors of so many hard fought battles who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to this result from no distrust of them. But feeling that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing that would compensate the loss that would attend the continuance of the contest — I determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past services have endeared them to their countrymen. By the terms of the agreement, officers and men can return to their homes and remain until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, and I earnestly pray that a merciful God will extend to you his blessing and protection. With unceasing admiration to your constancy and devotion to your country, and a greatful remembrance to your kind and generous consideration of myself, I bid you an affectionate farewell."

A SEARCH FOR FINAL REST

In Honored Glory

I cannot find a place to rest,
That I can call the very best.

For with my passing, life will end.
I do not know around the bend.

I gave my best to those who loved me true.
Now I know not what to do.

A final curtain is best of show,
So now I'll seek the afterglow. Anonymous

That all seven brothers survived the Civil War is a credit to their ability and luck to escape death on the battlefield. That they were in the front lines is indisputable.

A successful search for their final resting place was accomplished as the result of dedication on the part of those who care.

"HIGH ON A WINDY HILL"

Preface

The work of copying records from tombstones was started ten years ago as one of several projects of the Committee for Collecting Historical Data in The Historical Society of Washington County, Virginia. This compilation is confined to this county; however, several cemeteries near the lines of abjoining counties have been included because of historical relationship to the lands and people.

County road maps, Tennessee Valley Authority quadrangles and soil maps of the United States Department of Agriculture have been most important in finding locations. Residents in the different communities became interested and offered to give information as to locations of little private graveyards, which were usually found high on a windy hill and often under evergreen trees. In many instances the cemetery is in a church yard. Since the modern cemetery is now in a convenient place, the small family cemetery is beginning to be almost a thing of the past.

In general the cemeteries are well kept even though many stones have become shards. In the springtime hyacinths, daffodils, lilies and roses bloom from a carpet of periwinkle entirely covering some of the small abandoned cemeteries. There are others overgrown with briars, scrubby plants and fallen trees where only by using garden implements could some of the stones be found. Frequently one finds boxwood which was carefully planted at the graves many years ago. Very little symbolism was found except for the willow tree, the dove, the star and the clasped hands.

From many of the spots found in Washington County the poet Clinton Scollard (1860-1932) could have been inspired to write:

THE SLEEPER

Above the cloistral valley,
There lies a quiet sleeper
Upon a lonely hill.

All the long days of summer
The low winds whisper by,
And the soft voices of the leaves
Make a murmurous reply.

All the long eves of autumn
The loving shadows mass
Round this sequestered slumbering-place
Beneath the cool hill grass.

All the long nights of winter
The white drifts heap and heap
To form a fleecy coverlet
Above the dreamer's sleep.

All the long morns of springtime
The tear-drops of the dew
Gleam in the violet's tender eyes
As if the blossoms knew.

Ah, who would break the rapture
Brooding and sweet and still,
The great peace of the sleeper
Upon the lonely hill!

WALNUT GROVE CEMETERY—280

10 Aug. 1957 by Davis & McConnell

The land upon which this cemetery and the Walnut Grove Presbyterian Church are located belonged to Robert Preston, Sr. of Walnut Grove. Sometime prior to 1790, possibly as early as 1781, there was erected on the summit of the hill where the cemetery now is, a large log church which for many years was used as a church and school house by the people of the Walnut Grove Community.

ROLL OF HONOR

We found a soldier's life
Was not all glory,
When we left our homes to fight.
We thought the cause was just
And all the reasons right.
Manhood made us answer
The call to arms that day.
And everyone responded
Who had the name of Gray.
We served our country well,
And loved it true and just.
We'd ride out to serve again,
But the bugle's turned to rust.
In honored glory are our souls
As we return to dust.

JOHN CRAIG GRAY

ROLL OF HONOR

JOHN CRAIG GRAY

No record was found in the ROLL OF HONOR for John C. Gray. The family did not send his records to the Daughters of the Confederacy for verification causing this omission.

His direct descendents who would have contributed this information at the time it was being gathered in the Abingdon area, were then living on Black Oak Farm in Loudoun County in Northern Virginia, far away from the Abingdon area.

From stories related to me by my father, John C. Gray spent his final years crippled with arthritis in the same position that he had spent so many years in the saddle.

No doubt, his assignment as a recruiter took him over many miles of road and mountain in rain, sleet and snow,. According to my daddy's recollections, his father had to carry John C. from chair to chair in the "saddle" position. The mark of the cavalryman was set upon him until his death.

This page is dedicated to his place of honor with that of his brothers.

PUBLISHER'S PREFACE

This reprint of an important and scarce book should be welcomed by genealogical researchers, historians, and librarians alike. It contains a vast amount of historical and genealogical data from public and personal records covering a large area. In addition to numerous important lists scattered throughout the text, the work also contains biographical sketches of prominent citizens. Further records in the appendices contain additional names and information that should be of interest to tens of thousands of persons who trace their ancestry to that once remote frontier country.

The area covered in this volume includes early Southwest Virginia in general and, after its formation, Washington County in particular. In its early period, Southwest Virginia embraced nineteen present-day counties of Virginia and seventeen of West Virginia, as well as parts of other counties in these states. In the later period, the history of Washington County, from which several other counties originated, is traced from its formation down to the beginning of the twentieth century.

It should be called to the attention of the reader that the present edition is enhanced with two new features: firstly, we have included a Table of Contents, completely lacking in the original edition; secondly, we have compiled a new Index as the original was not in exact alphabetical order and contained much duplication. Consequently the number of pages in the Index has been reduced from thirty-seven to twenty-eight, which accounts for the change in pagination between this reprint and the original edition.

No. 7; Thomas M. Preston and John Eakin, in district No. 8; Robert L. Berry and Lilburn O. Byars, in district No. 9.

The court then unanimously elected James T. Preston colonel or field officer under the seventh clause.

A number of muskets had been furnished the county by the State authorities early in the year, and had been distributed throughout the county, but in such a manner as to render them of little value to the authorities, and at the May term of the court the sheriff of the county was directed to collect and deposit them in Abingdon.

During the spring and summer of 1861 ten companies were organized in Washington county, which were officered as follows:

The Washington Mounted Rifles—Captain William E. Jones.

The Mountain Boys—Captain William White.

The Glade Spring Rifles—Captain R. P. Carson.

Washington Independents—Captain Dr. James L. White.

Company B, Forty-eighth Virginia Regiment—Captain Milton White.

Company I, Forty-eighth Virginia Regiment—Captain James C. Campbell.

Company H, Thirty-seventh Virginia Regiment—Captain Robert E. Grant.

Goodson Rifle Guards—Captain John F. Terry.

Floyd Blues—Captain David C. Dunn.

Company F, Forty-eighth Virginia Regiment—Captain D. A. P. Campbell.

The Washington Mounted Rifles were sent to First Virginia Cavalry, Stuart's command, while the companies of Captains Terry, Carson, Grant, James L. White and William White formed a part of the Thirty-seventh regiment, commanded by Colonel Samuel V. Fulkerson, and the companies officered by D. A. P. Campbell, James C. Campbell and Milton White formed a part of the Forty-eighth regiment, commanded by Colonel John A. Campbell, of Abingdon, and D. C. Dunn's company formed a part of Floyd's Brigade. Captain A. C. Cummings was commissioned colonel by a committee composed of Governor Letcher, Judge Allen and Francis Smith, in the month of May, 1861, and was ordered to report at once to General Jackson at Harper's Ferry, which he did, and was there assigned to the command of the Second regiment, afterwards the Tenth Virbe six hundred and fourteen; thereupon the court directed Tobias Smith, John N. Humes, Abram Mongle and Joseph W. Davis to apportion the one hundred and twenty slaves required from this county, upon the male slaves between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, and required the slave-holders of the county to deliver his or her quota of slaves to the sheriff of this county at Abingdon, Goodson and Glade Spring on the 21st of February, 1863, and John L. Bradley and Moses Brooks were appointed agents or overseers for such slaves, and Floyd B. Hurt was directed to notify the railroad company of the number of slaves to be sent from this county to Richmond.

At the same term of the court an order was entered appointing the Rev. Thomas Catlett agent for the county to proceed to North Carolina to purchase cotton yarn and domestic for the destitute families of soldiers in this county.

In the summer of the year 1863, the portion of salt allotted to this county from the Saltworks was distributed among the people by T. G. McConnell, William R. Rhea and Robert C. Allison, in quantities not less than ten bushels and at $2 per bushel.

On Thursday evening, the 10th of September, 1863, Rebecca Lynch and Elizabeth Murray, of this county, were under an oak tree near Lynch's Spring on the turnpike at the head of McBroom's mill-dam, with two Confederate soldiers, during a storm. Lightning struck the tree under which they had taken shelter and the four persons were killed.

In the fall of the year 1863, Washington county was overrun by stragglers and deserters from the army, claiming to belong to the cavalry service. These men traveled about and over the county in bands of from two to twenty, and robbed the citizens indiscriminately of their money, clothing, horses, saddles, bridles, their grain and forage, by force and actual violence, and such was the condition of affairs that the County Court of Washington county appealed to the General Assembly of the State for a remedy, stating that they had appealed to the military authorities, but without avail.

In the fall of 1862 and the spring and summer of 1863 several companies of infantry and cavalry were organized in this county—viz.: Company E, of the Sixty-third Virginia Regiment, Captain David O. Rush; Company F, of the Sixty-third Virginia Regiment,

Washington County overrun by stragglers.

Captain James Snodgrass; Company C, of the Twenty-first Virginia Regiment, Captain R. J. Preston; Company ——, Twenty-first Virginia Cavalry, Captain Fred Gray.

In the fall of this year another requisition was made upon the county authorities for eighty slaves to work upon the fortifications at Saltville.

The county had been threatened with an invasion by the enemy during the fall of the year and had been overrun as before described, and the County Court, at the October term, petitioned the Governor to exempt this county from the requisition, but their petition was refused and the slaves were furnished early in the year 1864.

At the same term of the court an order was entered appointing John Roberts a general agent for the county to purchase supplies for the families of soldiers who were in indigent circumstances, and district agents were appointed in the several districts of the county with authority to purchase supplies for the same purpose and to draw upon John G. Kreger for such sums of money as were needed for the purpose.

At the November court, 1863, the districts of the commissioners of revenue for the county were designated, pursuant to an Act of Assembly, the Western District being No. 1, and the Eastern District No. 2.

By December, 1863, the condition of affairs was such that the people of the county were threatened with a famine for bread, and the County Court entered an order calling the attention of the Confederate authorities at Richmond to the condition of affairs in this county and asking their aid in every legitimate way to prevent any further appropriation of the means of the people of this county to the support of the army.

On the 16th of September, 1863, a company was organized at Abingdon for home defence. This company was officered as follows:

Captain, Peter C. Johnson.

First Lieutenant, Joseph T. Campbell.

Second Lieutenant, Charles F. Keller.

Third Lieutenant, W. R. Trigg.

A full complement of sergeants and corporals were appointed and Saturday was fixed as the day for drilling. This was the sec-to the Governor of the Commonwealth, requesting that a sufficient force be ordered out by the Governor to enforce the order of the County Court of this county.

Nothing more of importance occurred in this county until the close of the war in the following April.

This county, in addition to furnishing more than three thousand soldiers to the armies of the Confederate States, produced a number of officers who won distinguished honors in their several spheres, among them being Generals Joseph E. Johnson, John B. Floyd, William E. Jones, William Y. C. Humes, John S. Preston and Colonels John S. Mosby, Samuel V. Fulkerson, John A. Campbell, John F. Terry, R. P. Carson, A. C. Cummings, D. C. Dunn, Connally F. Lynch, James W. Humes, Abram Fulkerson and many others, all of whom were citizens of this county by birth or by choice.

The Confederate officers stationed in Abingdon during the war, so far as I can ascertain, were M. B. Tate, William Rodefer and E. Crutchfield, quartermasters; R. A. Williams and Francis Smith, commissaries; John H. Earnest, D. B. Baldwin and J. G. Martin, provost marshals; James K. Gibson and Floyd B. Hurt, Confederate States depositaries.

A hospital was maintained in the White House, opposite the residence of Mrs. John D. Mitchell, during the greater part of the war, and Dr. Lightfoot, of Kentucky, was the principal surgeon in charge, in 1864. The wounded soldiers at this hospital were attended by Drs. Barr, Heiskell, Pitts and Preston, and received every attention possible from the ladies of the town.

The close of the war found the people of this county in as deplorable a condition as could be imagined—without money, credit, clothing or the wherewithal to eat, with hundreds of wounded and disabled soldiers, their farm houses, fences, and farming utensils destroyed, and with grave apprehensions as to the future.

RECONSTRUCTION, 1865-1870.

Upon the surrender of the Confederate armies, the people of Virginia accepted the situation in good faith and were ready and willing to resume their former position in the Union and to loyally discharge all the duties imposed thereby. The victors in this contest had insisted that the one object in view was the preserva-

The ways of human existance
Are a mystery to us all
But as the stars so brightly shine
So also is their fall.
While we in wonderment
Watch in transfixed awe
As the panoply transforms us
Each one and all.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION LETTERS

Veterans Administration letters are included because of their information relative to the Civil War period.

Catherine McConnell's book, HIGH ON A WINDY HILL, resolved the problems listed in these letters.

Dear Ms King:

This is in response to your recent correspondence of June 21, 1982, requesting burial information, and birth dates of your seven brothers that served during the Civil War.

This office maintains alphabetical records of interment for those interred at this National Cemetery. These records fail to show that any of the seven brothers that you listed were interred in any of these burial locations.

As a matter of information, during the Civil War, graves of those who died in general hospitals, on the battlefields, or as prisoners of war, if marked at all, were designated by wooden headboards with the names and identifying data painted thereon. Many of these headboards deteriorated through exposure to the elements with the result that when the remains were later disinterred for removal to a national cemetery identifications could not be established and the graves were marked as unknown. There are 912 unknown soldiers interred at this National Cemetery. There is a possibility that the seven brothers could be among the unknown soldiers interred at this National Cemetery.

It is suggested that you communicate with the Chief, Central References Staff, National Archives and Records Service, General Services Administration, Washington, D.C. 20408, as that office maintains records and other pertinent data of those who military service was prior to 1912.

I trust that this information will be of asistance to you.

Sincerely yours,

Kevin J. Taylor

Dear Ms. King,

In response to your letters of 21 June, 1982 the Civil War records for the Winchester, Alexandria, Balls Bluff, Virginia and Congressional National Cemetery, Washington, D.C. were searched with negative results in locating the information you desired.

Normally, I would refer you to the National Archives for information. It is suggested that you write to the Daughters of the Confederate States, Richmond, Virginia as they have been helpful in the past in certain cases.

I am sorry that I was not able to help you further, please feel free to contact me if you feel I might be of further assistance.

Sincerely yours,

DAVID M. CARIOTA

Mrs. Katherine King

Spenceport, NY 14559

Dear Mrs. King:

I have your letter of June 21, 1982 in which you request any pertinent date I might have concerning seven brothers, John Craig Gray, Frederick T. Gray, William M. Gray. Robert Emmett Gray, Charles P. Gray, James Gray and David V. Gray, all of whom served the Confederate States of America.

I am sorry to inform you that there are no known Confederate remains in any of the national cemeteries in the Richmond area, only the remains of Union Army members who fell in battle and were subsequently reinterred in one of the five national cemeteries in the Richmond area. I do, however, have a listing of 102 Confederate remains who are interred at City Point National Cemetery in Hopewell, VA but none of the above are on that listing.

May I suggest, Mrs King, that you check with the Superintendent of Cemeteries, Room 413, City Hall, 900 E. Broad Street, Richmond, VA 23219 for any help he may be able to render. The telephone number is 804-780-8668.

I regret I was unable to help you more in your search.

Sincerely,

THE ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA

In the post-Civil War period, Brevet Brig.-Gen. Charles A. Whittier of the United States volunteers made the following comment in a speech before the Military Historical Society of Massachusetts:

"The army of Northern Virginia will deservedly rank as the best army which has existed on this continent; suffering privations unknown to its opponents it fought well from the early Peninsula days to the surrender of that small remnant at Appomattox. It seemed always ready, active, mobile; without doubt it was composed of the best men of the South, rushing to what they considered the defense of their country against a bitter invader; and they took the places assigned them, officer or private, and fought until beaten by superiority of numbers."

EPILOGUE

Paul Hayne Gray
1888-1963

Family history concerning the activities of my six great-great uncles following the Civil War is lost. Because of their burial sites, all in Washington County, we must assume the weary cavalrymen returned home and resumed their former lives raising sheep and horses.

We know that the presence of my great-grandfather, John Craig Gray, continued to be felt in the area for he was serving as Treasurer of Washington County, Virginia when my father, Paul Hayne Gray, was born in 1888.

Paul recalled that his grandfather, John Craig, lived with Paul's family in his declining years. So crippled with arthritis that he could not straighten his legs to walk, John Craig on nice days was carried by his son, Jonathan, to a chair beneath a large oak tree in the yard to read and enjoy watching the activities around him.

Paul, being the youngest of the boys in the family, stayed near the house helping his mother and listening to the stories his grandfather told. Unfortunately, Paul did not record the stories related by his grandfather,so they are lost.

Times were hard for large families in mountainous Washington County, so many moved up the Shenandoah Valley to more fertile land. Jonathan and several friends bought farms in Loudoun County and moved their families to that Northern Virginia area.

The men and older boys started up the valley first on horseback driving their flocks of sheep. Two weeks later, the women and children followed in wagons bringing their household goods and chickens. Paul wanted to ride with the men, but his father charged him with the duty of protecting the women and children on the trek north.

Black Oak Farm, in Loudoun County near Purcellville, Virginia, became the new home of the Gray family. Paul, being the most scholarly of the boys, continued his education at the Lincoln school, riding his horse to school each day.

A speaking contest during his last year at Lincoln was a highlight of the spring season. Paul enthusiastically prepared himself for the competition and made his way to the finals. On the all-improtant night, Paul and one other boy vied for the honor of winner. Following their presentations, the boys nervously awaited the verdict of the judge, their schoolmaster.

The other boy was declared winner. Paul was crushed. All his family and friends felt that Paul had made the better presentation, but the judge's decision was final. Feeling that he had been unjustly treated, Paul refused to return to school for the remainder of the term. His father, understanding the young man's hurt, suggested that Paul leave early for Richmond, Virginia and take a job while waiting for the opening of business school in the fall. This he did, finding a job as clerk in a pharmacy.

Richmond was an important railroad center in 1910. Railroading enthralled Paul, so he took a job with the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad upon completion of business school.

Soon he felt well enough established to propose marriage to Irene Hirst, who had herself completed business school in Charles Town, West Virginia and returned to Purcellville to work as secretary to the local attorney.

In 1913 the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad opened a large general office building in Wilmington, North Carolina to house their expanding business. Word went out that office workers were being hired at several dollars a week more than the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomic was paying.

Paul and some of his friends seized the opportunity to better their circumstances. Young men about to establish homes and families needed the best paying jobs they could find.

Shortly after arriving in Wilmington, Paul became dangerously ill. Irene and Paul's father made the 400-mile trip by train to Wilmington to see him. Upon their arrival at the hospital, they found the surgeon had performed the needed operation and Paul had survived. A long convalescence followed.

When World War I began in 1914, Paul was declared physically unfit for military service. Two years and two surgeries later, Paul was finally ready for marriage.

Paul and Irene built a home in Wilmington and started their family. Though Paul had chosen to leave the farm, he continued his interest in rural pursuits through his large vegetable garden, chickens and rabbits.

In 1918 the war ended and the proud couple's first child was born, a son, Charles Jonathan. Irene's father's name was Charles and Paul's father's name was Jonathan.

Life was good in 1920. Paul had progressed at his job, the house was paid for, and another child was expected. But then tragedy struck. The baby, a girl, did not survive.

The young couple found solace in their religious faith and each other. And two years later another baby was born, another girl, Katherine Alverta — named for her grandmothers, Katherine Hirst and Alverta Gray.

Paul and Irene took great pride in their children and encouraged excellence in them. Charles graduated from North Carolina State College in 1939 and became a mechanical engineer with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. Katherine graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1944 and became a teacher.

During World War II Charles served in the United States Army Transportation Corps in England, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Germany. Paul served as an air raid warden in his neighborhood. When an alert was sounded, it was his duty to see that no lights were visable outdoors in his area and watch for any unusual activity until the all clear signal was heard.

Paul and Irene lived to see both their children married and welcomed four grandchildren. Paul enjoyed 12 years of retirement, living until the age of 75 years. Irene survived him and lived until age 80 years.

Thus the odyssey of the Gray family moves on through time with new people, new goals, and the fulfillment of lives well lived.

Those who came before give meaning to those who face the future, each contributing a share in the makng of America.
